

SHORTY'S PLACE
Radio Repairs of The Best
Batteries of All Kinds

REDCLIFF REVIEW

OUR SLOGAN: An Industrial Metropolis of Industrious People Who Pull Together.

New Dramatized Theatre
The following plays at the theatre:
"The Laughing and the Sorrowing"
"The Blackboard" and "The Merry Men" in "Barney Broadcast"

Volume 53 THE REDCLIFF REVIEW THURSDAY, FEB. 9th, 1934 Number 15

All The Town Officials Elected By Acclamation

Only Required Number to Fill Vacancies

Just as J. Cox will be the mayor on himself for the next two years.

This was the verdict handed by returning officer F. Baird at the close of nominations last night. Cox was elected by acclamation as there were no other nominations for the office submitted.

The four vacancies on the Council were also filled by acclamation as only the required number were nominated. These were Messrs. A. Brydie, nominated by J. N. Dacre, and M. Rindahl, H.M. Sangster, nominated by B. Broughton and G. H. Works, George Myers, nominated by B. Broughton and G. H. Works, and J. N. Dacre, nominated by M. Worts and J. W. Pickering.

As Mr. Sanderson was the last nominee he was elected to fill the one year term caused by the resignation of Councilor Harrogate.

The School Board there were three vacancies and four candidates were nominated. They were Oscar Vogstad, nominated by S. Britt and F. Jones, A. McGimpsey, nominated by G. Newham and A.G. Osorode, Mrs. E.T. Stone, nominated by G. H. Worts and Wm. Speers, Mrs. J. Kitchin, nominated by J. Stratton and H. Johnson.

Mr. McGimpsey has since won his name from nomination as he means that the three other candidates will be declared elected by acclamation and that there will be no election.

The trustees for this year will be H.G. Sheasby, H. Johnson, Mrs. Kitchin, Mrs. Stone and Mr. O. Vogstad.

A bridge party of four tables under the auspices of Vesper Lodge was held at the St. Andrew's Church on Thursday evening last. Miss Orpha Taylor carried off the honors and Mrs. P. McDermott the consolation.

Don't miss seeing the high school students in their Dramatic Competition in the Little Theatre Friday evening of this week. The Little Theatre Group will also also put on a one-act play entitled "The Maker of Dreams."

The St. W.A. or St. Ambrose Church held a very successful social evening in the parish hall on Monday evening. The first prize for bridge went to Mrs. P.M. Stewart and the consolation to Mrs. G.H. Worts. In what the honors were won by Wm. Willis and the consolation by Mrs. P. Cann.

At the ratepayers annual meeting in Blairmore a resolution was passed petitioning the provincial government to change the town net making it compulsory that the financial statement of towns be printed not less than two weeks before the annual meeting. The Blairmore meeting was adjourned so as to give ratepayers time to study the financial statement.

Mrs. Woodcock Passed Away Last Sunday

Funeral From Gordon Memorial Church on Tuesday

Although it had been known for the past two weeks that Mrs. A. W. Woodcock was seriously ill, the news of her death early Sunday morning was a distinct shock to her many friends here.

Deceased, who was 77 years of age, had not been enjoying the best of health since the death of her husband last May, but hopes were entertained that, after the shock of her great loss, she would regain her usual health, instead she gradually grew weaker and about two weeks ago she suffered a stroke which her already shattered condition could not withstand.

The late Mrs. Woodcock was born at St. Stephen, New Brunswick, April 8th, 1856 and when a young girl moved with her parents to Minnesota, U.S.A., locating at Princeton where she grew to womanhood. She received her more advanced education in Minneapolis and taught school for a time prior to 1876 when she was married to Arthur W. Woodcock. The young couple resided in Princeton until 1910 when they came to Redcliff, where Mr. Woodcock organized and operated the first industry established here—The Brick and Coal Plant.

As one of the first families to settle here the Woodcock home was the centre of many social activities for young and old and many a youth and damsel of those early days looks back with gratitude and pleasant memories on the motherly interest shown in them by the deceased.

Always of a sincere and kindly disposition and one who never considered anything too much trouble when working in the interests of the town, the church or those in trouble, the late Mrs. Woodcock made many close friends who will greatly regret her passing.

The late Mrs. Woodcock was always very active in church work. She was the president of the First Ladies' Aid Society organized in Redcliff and the first to receive Life Membership in the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church here. She was presented with a Gold Star and Life Membership from the Ladies' Auxiliary of the "Freemont Woodcock Post" of Princeton—her son Freemont having been the first Princeton boy to enter the great War and after whom the Memorial was named.

Deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. R.S. Hodge and Mrs. R. C. Hargrave, both of whom reside here. A daughter, Ada May, died in early childhood and an only son, Freemont, made the supreme sacrifice in the Great War at Passchendaele. Bruce Woodcock of this town, is a grandson as are also Ralph, Donald and Dickie Hargrave, all of Redcliff.

The funeral which was largely attended took place from Gordon Memorial Church on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. R. Erskine Fox officiating. The remains were taken to rest in the family plot in the Medicine Hat Cemetery.

How is your Subscription?

Interesting Afternoon At The High School

Editor's Team in the Lead by Two Points

The High School Literary Society held a very interesting meeting in the High School room last Friday afternoon. Impromptu speeches were given by the four teams sponsored by the editor, the president, the vice president and the secretary. Each team gave two speeches, a serious one and a comic. The secretary's team was pronounced the winners by the judges, Miss Broadfoot, Miss Selhorn and Mr. Pow. The president's team took second place. The winning team was represented by Emma Podestis, who spoke on the subject of the Grand Opera: "Il Trovatore," and Sam Fulton whose subject was "Cupid."

The president's team consisted of Jenn Patterson and Mildred Walton, the former spoke on "The Bohemian Girl" and the latter on "Pigs." The other speakers were Jim Brown on "Tannhauser" and Velma Jean Tremblath on "Lunatics," Reggie Rose on "Carmen" and Phyllis Sheldon on "Saxaphone." The speeches were well delivered and entertaining.

The next meeting will be on February 16th when presentation speeches will be given by representatives of the four teams already mentioned.

The Editor's team is now leading by two points.

The Private Life of Henry VIII at Monarch

When Charles Laughton was a little boy in Scarborough, England, where he was born, his parents used to reward him for good behavior by promising him that when he was a big man he might go to the Dartmouth Naval Academy, near Plymouth, and learn to be an Admiral's boy—the King's Navy.

But that was all a part of yesterday in the life of the man who, today is playing the role of England's greatest monarch in the London Films production of "The Private Life of Henry VIII," showing NOW at the Monarch Theatre.

When Laughton approached the years of discretion when he began to think for himself, he decided that the Navy would have to get along without whatever nautical genius he might possess because he was fully determined that his future lay in the World of the Theatre.

Driven hard by an eager ambition to learn all he could about the stage and everything pertaining to it, young Laughton secured a job in a London hotel to earn money enough to enable him to nurse his studies in his chosen field.

Like most of England's youth when the World War came along the youthful Laughton, still little more than a boy, enlisted and "did his bit."

Returning from the battlefield he enrolled at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London and, after graduation, secured his first stage role, in 1926. He won almost immediate recognition and his rise since then has been consistent and rapid.

Cast of Characters For The High School Dramatic Contest

Will Be Put on in Connection With Little Theatre Play

The following is the cast of characters for the school Dramatic Competition which takes place tomorrow night in the Little Theatre.

1. Literature 1 Class—Courtship of Miles Standish: Miles Standish, Jack Brydie; Priscilla, Doris Wyatt; John Alden, Curtiss Buchholz; Dame Hadley, Susan Skidmore.

2. Literature 2 Class—The Rainbow Inn: Innkeeper, Phyllis Sheldon; Macey, Elsie Blades; Tooley, Velma Jean Tremblath; Rodway, Eleanor Learmonth; Dowdies, Elmer Mallard; Silas, Graham Ellis.

3. Literature 3 Class—Mr. Bumble's Proposal: Mr. Bumble, Richard Rose; Mrs. Corney, Florence Jacobson; An Old Hag, Margaret Rutherford.

4. French 2 Class—Jean Valjean: Jean Valjean, Jim Lowens; The Bishop, Jim Brown; Mmes. Marjolaine, Emma Podestis; A gentleman, Sam Fulton.

5. French 3 Class—Columba: Columba, Jean Patterson; Lydia Nevil, Ruth Pow; Cholina, Lillian Lennings; Lieut. Orso Della Rebbia, Reggie Rose; A bandit, Robert Buchholz.

The Little Theatre Group will also put on a one-act play, "The Maker of Dreams," in which the players are Miss Emma Frey, Rev. P. M. Stewart and Mr. Bernard Thacker.

Be sure to get your tickets early and have your seats reserved before the best ones are all gone.

Mrs. W. Motran, of Calgary, who has been undergoing treatment at Rochester, arrived in town Sunday night to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Lavelle.

Redcliff Reminiscences

Taken From Our File of February 12th, 1915

The concert arranged by Messrs. Hitchen and Worts in aid of the Relief Fund was a great success. These young men have now completed arrangements for holding an ice carnival at the south end rink, the proceeds to go to the same fund.

The choir of St. Ambrose entertained Mr. and Mrs. Frank Congram to a private supper and social and also presented them with a handsome wedding gift.

The by-law for the raising of $500.00 by sale of debentures was defeated.

Brooks and Redcliff played a hot hockey game here on Friday.

The Council will prepare a by-law for the purpose of borrowing $2000 for market buildings, to be submitted to the ratepayers soon.

A temperance convention was held here last Tuesday with Dr. Shearer presiding.

Gleichen Plays Hockey In The Hat Saturday

Will Play in the Hat Arena Game at 6:15

What promises to be one of the season will be played at Medicine Hat on Saturday evening of this week when the Gleichen Gunners will play the Monarchs in the play off.

These two teams always put up a good game, and as Saturday's bout is a very important one for both teams a real smart game is assured.

The game is called for 9:15 Saturday night.

The first home and home game played last night at Gleichen ended in a scoreless draw. This looks like a real game for Saturday night.

Big Art Exhibit At Medicine Hat

In Oddfellows' Hall February 19th, 20th and 21st

What is said to be a very outstanding Art Exhibit will be held in the new Oddfellows' Hall in Medicine Hat on February 19th, 20th and 21st. This will be open to the public free of charge afternoon and evening of these days. A collection will be taken will be taken on leaving the building to defray expenses. However there is no obligation to donate if one does not desire.

A special effort is being made to get the senior school students of the district to visit the exhibit and no collection will be expected from them.

The Exhibition promises to be a very interesting one. There will be about 40 samples of the Scottish Water Color Society from Scotland, between 30 and 40 samples of the work of A. C. Leitch, R. B. A., a group from the Alberta Society of Artists, 20 or 25 colored prints of master pieces from the University collection and some Chinese embroidery and water colors.

Mrs. G. Menaric and daughter who have been visiting in Calgary for the past few weeks returned to town last Monday.

During the past few days about 50 antelope have been feeding on the prairie at the top of the hill between here and Medicine Hat. They appear to be quite tame and make a pretty picture for the tourist as he passes by on the highway.

JUST FOR FUN

He who laughs—lasts.

The only thing we get on our radio is dust—Judge.

A woman is always ready to take what's becoming to her.

About the only difference between the old dime novel and one of today is $1.90—Ohio News.

If all the economists in the world were laid end to end, they would never reach a conclusion.

We call our rich relatives the kin we love to touch.—E. Cantor.

Two Members of U. F. A. Leave The Government

Will Take Seat With The Liberals This Week

Another evidence of the waning popularity of the U.F.A. government was furnished last week when P. A. Miskew formerly U.F.A. member in the legislature for Victoria, notified Premier Brownlie that he was deserting the party and would take his seat on the Liberal's side of the house when the legislature opens.

This was quite a surprise all round as Mr. Miskew had already been slated by the Premier to move the resolution to adopt the Speech from the Throne.

Mr. Miskew was formerly a Liberal but unless he consulted his constituents and had their consent before changing his allegiance, he made me think, a serious "miscalculation."

Since the above was in type another U.F.A. member has deserted the party and has asked that he be seated with the Liberals in the legislature. The second deserter is Mr. Ormer St. Germain, member for St. Albert who ran against and defeated a Liberal in the last General Election.

Come and spend a social afternoon on St. Valentine's Day, on Wednesday 14th in the School Room of Gordon Memorial Church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid. There will be a program of music, also jig-saw competitions, for which prizes will be awarded. Afternoon tea, will also be served.

Admission 25c 280 o'clock.

In the churches next Sunday. Services will be held as usual.

Inspector Fuller, of Edmonton paid an official visit to the local High School yesterday.

In the drawing for the Shetland pony held last week and Stanley Pinder drew the lucky number.

Mrs. Rand and son Donnie, who have been visiting with Mrs. Rand's mother, Mrs. D. McLachlan for the past month have returned to their home in Sumner land B. C.

Tickets are selling like hot cakes for the entertainment in the Little Theatre on Friday evening of this week. Be sure to get yours now and avoid disappointment.

The Review heard several express pride in our school boys last Tuesday as they stood at attention with hats off while a funeral passed the playground during recess. It is quite evident that at least some of our teaching staff are teaching more than reading, writing and "arithmetical."

Among the list of students who obtained diplomas "with honors" in the Departmental Examinations of 1933 we notice the name of one of our boys—Bernard Ernest Thacker. The Review extends congratulations to Bernard on his splendid achievement.

Military Plane Speedy

New British Machines Has Race of

Clash That Is Imminent
Defense of London, Eng., against aerial attack will be the primary duty in war emergency of the new "day and night" angle-winged fighting aeroplanes ordered by the Air Ministry. They will patrol the skies, each right in its allotted sector and flying at predetermined heights, on the lookout for many raiding planes. Considerable endurance on one fuel load, rapid climb to operational height and great speed high above the earth are essential.

The new aeroplanes, which had been ordered as a first step in numbers sufficient to replace old equipment of one squadron of the Home Defense Force, is expected to meet the demands of exacting work fully required of it in case of future conflict.

Its speed of 217 miles an hour, reached at a height of 16,500 feet above sea level, makes it the fastest radial-engine military aeroplane yet ordered for any air force. Though it carries a big fuel load and much equipment, its rate of climb is impressive. From sea level to 20,000 feet it occupies the "Gannett" less than twelve minutes, its service "ceiling"—the height at which the rate of climb has decreased to 10 feet a minute—is no less than 35,000 feet, or 4,000 higher than the summit of Mount Everest.

In addition to eighty-one gallons of fuel and six gallons of oil, the "Gannett" carries two Vickers guns and 1,200 pounds of ammunition, complete night flying gear, radio receiving and sending apparatus, oxygen-breathing equipment. Its armament is made for the carriage of four twenty-pound bombs, held in light racks below the bottom plane.

Exports Of Foodstuffs

Big Increase Shown In 1933 Over

Previous Year
Exports of bacon and hams from Canada in 1933 were doubled in value compared with those in 1932. Live cattle exports also show more than a 200 per cent. increase compared with the previous year, while the exports of eggs increased 700 per cent. The final figures for the export shipments of bacon and hams will, it is estimated, total about 75,000,000 pounds, of which approximately 70,000,000 pounds went to the British Isles.

More than 55,500 live cattle went from Canada to the British Isles in 1933. About 8,500 head went to other countries, or a total of over 64,000 head. In 1932 19,925 head went to Britain and 11,494 to other countries, or 31,419 altogether.

The 1933 egg exports totaled about 2,000,000 dozen. In 1932 the total was only 772,000 dozen. On the other hand practically no eggs were imported.

Canada shipped over 1,000,000 pounds of dressed turkey, mostly turkeys, to the British market for the Christmas trade.

The butter exports in 1933 amounted to about 4,000,000 pounds, of which went to the British Isles. Exports of milk powder, condensed milk and evaporated milk totalled nearly 25,000,000 pounds.

Seal Island Is Historic

Canada's First Life Saving Station

Was Established There
It is interesting to note that Seal Island, which figured so prominently in the story of the burning of the Ellen T. Marshall, was the point on which the first life saving station in Canada was established. Its founder was Capt. R. H. Henson, whose life "Friendship" was wrecked at Hicton Cove, on the west end of Cape St. Nicholas. He and his wife, Mrs. Henson, it is said, were greatly distressed by the tales of sailors who had perished after fighting their way to land from wrecks. The first light of the season was on Nov. 28, 1831.

A Logical Conclusion
Betty, aged four, had been taken to see the three newly-arrived kittens. The next day having been only the other two having been deliberately extinguished in a watery grave. Betty sought an explanation, and was told that, in these days of economic depression, it was difficult for a mother to bring up more than one kitten.

Betty remained silent for some moments and then said, "Were the three kittens?"

A herd of buffalo transferred north to Alaska five years ago is now more than doubled in number.

W. N. U. 2030

THREATS FROM OFFICIALS END CHICAGO'S MILK STRIKE

The milk strikers in Chicago had a wild time stopping the milk supply from entering the city till officials started to threaten embargoes and then the strike blew up. Here we see steel-toothed drags placed on the high blockade that shut off Chicago's milk supply. At the right, one truck that attempted to crash through the picket lines, finished up in the Chicago River. An emergency supply of milk was flown into the city by aeroplane after strikers had held up several trains.

Strange Fish

Octopus Taken Commercially Off The

The Pacific Coast
Recent newspaper dispatches tell of the chance capture of a big octopus in Newfoundland waters, after a fast and furious battle, that have had some special interest for British Columbia fishermen, since taken commercially off the Pacific coast. The catch is never larger—only 31,000 pounds in 1931, for example—and octopus capture is incidental to other fishing operations. All of the catch is marketed in the fresh form, with Oriental residents of British Columbia the buyers.

It may be, naturally enough, that most Canadian do not know very much about the octopus of the Pacific coast and there's another fish found in the Dominion with which they may not be familiar. This latter chap is the fish called "Inconnu," or translated, "Unknown," a name believed to have been given it by French voyagers of the old days of first penetrating to the far north. Known scientifically as Stenopus markedensis, the Inconnu occurs in the Mackenzie, Slave, and Yukon rivers, Great Slave Lake, and other northwestern waters. Indeed, it never occurs but it occurs in some places in such abundance that a sergeant of the old Royal North West Mounted Police reported some years ago that there were so many of the fish in Buffalo River that he "was nearly able to make across the river on their backs." Possibly the walking was made easier, by the way, through the fact that the Inconnu is a sluggish fish.

Inconnu are silvery fish, with small eyes and feeble tails, but vision and touch are sufficiently good to enable them to get food enough to make them big. Sometimes they reach a weight of fifty pounds or more, though most are very much smaller. The fish are not marketed commercially but they are valuable as food for the dog teams. Dried and smoked they are also used by the Indians. Two methods of catching them are employed—using gill nets and using hook and line. A report of a few years ago also stated that "the Eskimo at the mouth of the Mackenzie River catch them through the ice by means of a hook and line baited with a strip of bone of horse."

Restored To Relatives

Woman Who Was Thought Drowned

On Titanic Located in Montreal
Believed by her family to have drowned in the sinking of the Titanic 22 years ago, when more than 1,500 lives were lost, Mrs. Lizzie Gray Buchanan is to be restored to them when she journeys to Scotland in a few months.

Through a misunderstanding Mrs. Buchanan's family thought she was on board the ill-fated vessel, while she was safe in Montreal. Mrs. Buchanan changed her address at that time and so did her relatives in Scotland. Letters were sent to the dead letter office.

There are three brothers and three sisters in Glasgow.

Hurricane On The Stars
Hurricane on the stars that blow 144,000 miles per hour, rushing 1,000 times faster than the most terrible storm wind ever measured on earth, were reported for the first time before the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Cambridge, Mass.

Peace Topics For Study

Suggestions In Connection With Project Include Many Subjects

Why the collective system of maintaining world peace failed in Manchuria is given as the basis of an entire section in the discussion outline of the national peace study project launched by the League of Nations Office in Canada.

The following other considerations are suggested for examination by the groups which are invited to take up the study through which they may not be familiar. This latter chap is the fish called "Inconnu," or translated, "Unknown," a name believed to have been given it by French voyagers of the old days of first penetrating to the far north. Known scientifically as Stenopus markedensis, the Inconnu occurs in the Mackenzie, Slave, and Yukon rivers, Great Slave Lake, and other northwestern waters. Indeed, it never occurs but it occurs in some places in such abundance that a sergeant of the old Royal North West Mounted Police reported some years ago that there were so many of the fish in Buffalo River that he "was nearly able to make across the river on their backs." Possibly the walking was made easier, by the way, through the fact that the Inconnu is a sluggish fish.

Canada's attitude towards article 10 of the covenant which provides for the preservation of the territorial integrity of the states numbers of the league as against external aggression is included for review. The question is asked whether war can be eliminated without removing its cause, economic, political, dynamic and religious.

Books For Isolated Areas

10,000 Volumes From Toronto Public

Library For...
Destined to relieve the monotony of winter evenings in poor or isolated districts of Saskatchewan, the books of books were shipped recently from the Saskatoon public library through the medium of Angus Mowat, Saskatoon librarian.

Foreign exchange developments kept many American and British tourists from Italy in the last season.

At Swains Water, harvest forest a jug of water was given the place of honor owing to the prolonged drought.

A Real Bargain Hunter

Rich Englishwoman Had Variety Of

Articles Stored In House
A secret passion for bargains in the late Miss Philip Smith, wealthy woman of Hove, England, who died at the age of 104, leaving a fortune of £175,000, revealed at Brighton. After her death it was found that spare rooms were crammed almost from floor to ceiling with these bargains. There were miles of cloth and other materials for dresses, curtains and sheets, dozens of rolls of towel, scores of blankets and table linen, and articles of every kind. But the most extraordinary articles in the collection were thirty-four woolen chest protectors for boys and dozens of children's socks. The stuff was sold by auction, the sale lasting three days.

Cruising The Stratosphere

Possibly Coming Within Next Decade

Opinion Of Air Commodore
The day when the public will be cruising the stratosphere is not far distant, possibly coming within the next decade, Air Commodore P. F. M. Pelow, one of England's most noted aviators, predicted in Detroit. The commodore, former aide-de-camp to King George V, was the leader of an expedition which flew over Mt. Everest last April. Within the next ten years, he predicted, virtually all mail will be carried by plane. He said that he expected important safety improvements to be perfected in 1934. "Soon we will have apparatus to penetrate fog for several miles," he said. "Fog is one of the greatest hazards."

Help From All Countries

Money from Europe, Asia, Africa and the Americas has been subscribed toward the building of a new church in the tiny log church of St. Andrew, situated in the nearby village of Greatenog, Ougar, England. The rector of the parish claims that the structure dates back 1,200 years, and is the oldest Christian church in the world. He says it never has been closed.

"That's a nice suit! Did you have two pairs of trousers made as I did yesterday?"
"Yes, but I find them very warm to the legs."

Increase In Canadian Shipping

Decided Increase In Volume Of Ex-

port Commodities
Ocean-bound shipping from the ports of Saint John, New Brunswick; Halifax, Nova Scotia; Quebec, and Montreal on the River St. Lawrence, and Vancouver, British Columbia, was fractionally greater in 1933 compared with 1932, despite a reduction of 48,450,000 bushels in the quantity of grain shipments which constitute Canada's bulk of exports. The tonnage of vessels cleared from Canadian ocean ports during the first 11 months of 1933 was 38,000 more than in the corresponding period of 1932.

These figures reflect the decided increase in the volume of exports of commodities other than grain which in the 11 months under review showed an increase of $41,693,855 over the previous year. The ports of Montreal and Quebec during the navigation season saw an increase of 78,742 tons in the tonnage of vessels cleared. The ports of Saint John, Halifax, and Vancouver recorded slight reductions in clearances.

A decided increase in the quantity of shipping in Canadian inland waters was also reported for 1933. The tonnage of vessels passing through the new Welland shipping canal alone totalled over 8,290,000 tons, an increase of approximately 200,000 tons over 1932. The quantity of freight carried by these vessels amounted to over nine million tons, an increase of more than 675,000 tons.

Will Remember Royal Scot

Montreal Woman Visitor Got Stuck

In St. Xavier Cathedral
One woman among the crowds who joined the long line-up to view the Royal Scot, famous London Midland train, when it came to the city last night, became so attached to the second coach that she stayed there for 40 minutes and not a soul could get her away.

According to John Lye, president of the Canadian Railroad Historical Association, she was a woman of unusually large proportions and with difficulty had squeezed through the first coach. All went well, she said a gathering of the association at the Château de Frontenac, until she arrived at the second coach. There she became wedged in the narrow corridor between the two coaches, and the struggling on her part had the least effect. The exertion did, however, she said.

Nearly three-quarters of an hour was spent freeing the unfortunate lady from her unenviable predicament. Mr. Lye said, and he was surprised it had been possible to get her out without dismantling the coach.

Believes Cream Is Bracer

When Taken With Coffee Metabolism

Shows Greater Increase
It is the black coffee and cream concoction that, served as a post-prandial throat, that serves as the bracer?
Scientific research shows it must be the cream, according to Lottie M. H. Russell and Helen B. Burton at University of Oklahoma.

Talcum-cosmo showed an average increase of 384 per cent. in rate of metabolism at the end of half an hour by drinking black coffee, while coffee with cream increased the rate 7.75 per cent.

The experimenters cautioned that the smallness of the group tested gave no dogmatic basis for prediction.

A Dramatic Fetal Code

On January 1, 1934, there went into effect in Germany a penal code which is perhaps the most drastic of modern times. Many of those new laws had the bare code extended to the essence as a result. Serious offenders who are considered to constitute "a public menace" will not be released from jail even after serving their sentences. They will be compelled to perform forced labor as long as they are so considered.

The Land Of Sunshine

Only two free editions of the Evening Independent, St. Petersburg, Florida, were given away during 1933, in accordance with the "sunshine offer" of a free edition every day the sun fails to shine up to press his Major Lew B. Brown, owner, who originated the offer, said.

The Man Who Meant Well
If all the public houses in this city were placed end to end, they would reach from Glasgow to Edinburgh. The Mayor said: "Heck, more, what a waste!"

Young Women Advised

To Learn Agriculture

Too Many Choosing Office Work
Opinion Of Welfare Workers
Bridgette Jones, welfare worker in the midst of a campaign to get the girls out from in front of typewriters and filing cases and put them behind the plow.

This latest back-to-the-farm movement, is sponsored by Miss Coady, Canada's bulk of exports. The tonnage of vessels cleared from Canadian ocean ports during the first 11 months of 1933 was 38,000 more than in the corresponding period of 1932.

"Why not?" asked Miss Coady. "Twenty-five per cent. of the people are dependent on the 25 per cent. who show things. And under the heading of agriculture come dairying and farming. Why shouldn't a woman manage a tree nursery, for instance?"

The trouble is Miss Coady says, that there are too many girls who want to be stenographers and secretaries and not enough who yearn to work the soil. The women's welfare, as a snap of her fingers, can line up George Washington, University, the T.W.C.A. and the Kiwanis Club in a drive to convert stenographers into dairy farmers.

"Why not?" asked Miss Coady. "Twenty-five per cent. of the people are dependent on the 25 per cent. who show things. And under the heading of agriculture come dairying and farming. Why shouldn't a woman manage a tree nursery, for instance?"

The rest of them just coast through the days work and instead of having their minds on their business, they're trying to decide whether to wear the black or red. If the last lot, don't find out why it isn't. If the grass is greener on the other side of the fence, you can make yours just as green."

Get a grade with a powder puff attachment and a rake with a truck perfunctory handle and a team into the agricultural situation. If you can get some satens overalls, a white shirt and a tie, and a pique jacket, you undoubtedly will find that crops respond more readily.

Newest Airliners For

Cross Channel Routes

Will Carry Thirty-Nine Passengers
Besides Mail And Freight
Early this year the first of the two new airliners being built at Rochester for Imperial Airways will be ready to fly. The second machine is expected to follow a few weeks later, and both craft should be ready in the spring for work on the cross-channel routes.

Additional details of the big aircraft indicate 39 passengers will be accommodated in three cabins, of which the forward cabin, with seats for twelve, will be the smoke-room. Twelve passengers will find seats in the middle cabin, and fifteen in the aft cabin. Three entrances will provide access to the interior, one for the pilot near the nose of the cabin, and two at the rear forward cabin and another at the rear cabin.

Maximum attainable speed of the new craft, which have been styled the "Scylla" class, will be in the neighborhood of 140 miles per hour. The cruising speed is expected to be 108 miles an hour, with the aeroplane fully laden to its gross weight of more than 14 tons. Maximum range, attained by a certain reduction of the passenger and cargo load, will be about 700 miles. A second alternative landing provides for the carriage of 35 passengers instead of 39, and no less than 1,600 pound of mail and freight.

A Hissing Diplomat

Betty had been invited to have lunch at the home of a little friend, and when she had been carefully cautioned by her mother before she left home.

When the child returned her mother asked her how she had liked the lunch. "Oh, mother," replied the little girl, "I just asked for the recipe, so that you could make any more. And Mrs. Smith gave me another piece."

While we were walking in the park one day, a small insect's attention was drawn to the swans on the lake. After gazing intently for some minutes the insect turned and said, in a long neck Anne Laurie must have been."

When a doctor who said that because a man could not stand with his feet together and his eyes closed, without swaying, he was a drunkard, the recorder at the Old Bailey said he did him to do so himself. The doctor swayed, and the case was dismissed!

The Prince of Wales is so busy that the reason that he is an "eccentric" bed" added.

FANCIFUL FABLES

"I KNOW, I'M SELLING LIFE INSURANCE ON THE SIDE AND REALLY, IF YOUR BUSINESS WERE OURS, YOU'D BE INTERESTED IN OUR NEW DOUBLE-INDEMNITY POLICY..."

Unusual Situation in China

Women Gain Prominence And Are Crowding Men Out

Women, from shop-stew girls to university professors, are so much in the news in China that they are crowding the men out of the picture. The Chinese, long accustomed to keeping their women behind the closed door, now find them very much in the open. At dinner parties, balls, theatres, sports events and all public and social functions Chinese women are very much in evidence.

General Han Pu-chi, Governor of Shantung, who is a militarist of the old school, is a convert. On a recent visit to Peking he complained bitterly because officials here spent so much time in the company of women. But on his last inspection tour of his own province he was accompanied by two women propagandists. In all the cities and towns he visited he turned the women loose to tell their sisters to bob their hair and quit binding their feet.

The increasing prominence of women in the towns has revived the ancient Chinese legend of a land inhabited entirely by women. Research indicates that the land referred to in the tale was meant to be the Kurile Islands. The yarn has it that in the old days the Kuriles were inhabited by fisherwomen who knew nothing about men.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaels

ENCOUNTER

It happened, after many years, the met; Upon them both Time's hand had worked its change. Aloud her eyes were shadowing faintly his mouth was grim, his smile was cold and strange. A hundred years he'd lived in the city streets' high ways. A bump for the stage where they stood. And around him neat shirt, ear-piercing call. Yet none more harsh than their rebellious mood.

An instant this two strangers stood and gaped. Then, with one hand, a thousand smiles apart. Then rushed life within their spirits bleared. And fussed them once again, loved. Do it will ever be between these two, Though next they meet on some sphere far and new.

Latest Noxious Weed

Ways Sought To Prevent Distribution Of Hoary Peppergans

The Dominion Seed Branch announces the latest noxious weed said to appear in Canada, namely, the hoary peppergans, and in co-operation with provincial Departments of Agriculture is pursuing investigations as to its source and the prevention of its attaining widespread distribution.

Buyers with seed in 1934 kitchen. Besides the stove, cupboard and other appliances this kitchen is a "planning deck" wherein the housewife becomes the home executive.

Another novelty is the five-shelf cupboard that becomes a dining room table without even disturbing the dials on the shelves.

Whitting said he expected the show to mark a revival in the industry.

Jack—Can you sew, cook and keep house?

Allice—Yes, indeed.

Jack—Well, if the worst comes to the worst you oughtn't to have any trouble in getting a job.

A builder who was speaking in public for the first time said: "I am unaccustomed to public speaking. My proper place is on the scaffold."

Beecham's PILLS

The World Famous Remedy for LIVER & STOMACH TROUBLES

"Oh, well, all's fair in—"

"That was neither," Peter interrupted him sternly.

"Oh, yeah? Gonna start bossin' me again?"

"I should say not. I wouldn't consider the job again. In that what you came here for, to offer me a chance to be your guardian again?"

"No— and yes. Fact is, I'm up against it, and I wondered if you could help me a little, Peter, you always were a good scout. I have some work promised after next month, but I gotta wait until then."

"While you finish your place for the exhibit? It's the same with me."

"Excuse? Who said I was working for the exhibit?"

"No. Are you?"

"Why, yes—thought you had the same model, didn't you?"

"Say, if you suppose I'm crazy enough to think I have a chance to win anything you enter?"

"I don't know, why not. Besides, it brings your work to the attention of the right people. That's the reason you're in it, isn't it?"

"Of course, but I don't expect to."

(To Be Continued)

Marks Anniversary

Three Phases Of History Recalled By Famous War Unit

Three phases of the history of a famous Canadian fighting unit were recalled at Beatty St. Drill Hall, Vancouver, when the British Columbia regiment celebrated its fiftieth anniversary.

Young men who now form the unit which glories in the name of Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles gave a lively display of their military and physical training and were reminded of the splendid traditions of the regiment by groups which represented the old Sixth Regiment of forty years ago, the famous fighting Seventh Battalion of Great War days and their fellows who carry on today.

An officer, an N.C.O. and a private of each of these phases in the history were uniformed in the dress of their respective periods.

New Type Of Kitchen

One Feature Is Cupboard That Becomes Dining Table

The American Furniture Industry opened its 25th annual show in Chicago with a display of new ideas for washing machines on display in the spacious Furniture Mart on Lake Shore drive.

Buyers with seed in 1934 kitchen. Besides the stove, cupboard and other appliances this kitchen is a "planning deck" wherein the housewife becomes the home executive.

Another novelty is the five-shelf cupboard that becomes a dining room table without even disturbing the dials on the shelves.

Whitting said he expected the show to mark a revival in the industry.

Jack—Can you sew, cook and keep house?

Allice—Yes, indeed.

Jack—Well, if the worst comes to the worst you oughtn't to have any trouble in getting a job.

A builder who was speaking in public for the first time said: "I am unaccustomed to public speaking. My proper place is on the scaffold."

Swollen Joints

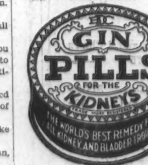

often are a warning that your kidneys have become depressed and are straining. Don't suffer needlessly. Take Gilt Pills to clean and assist your kidneys to function properly.

Unsuspected Author—"After my death the world will realize what I have done."

Companion—"Well, don't worry about it, old chap. You will be out of harm's way then."

Cotton seed is an industrial product now worth some $200,000,000 a year in the U.S., whereas once it was thought a total waste.

Customs collections in the Dominican republic are greater than a year ago.

..: chest

young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart. Until Peter is able to provide for her, Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money until she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Malson, his former room-mate with whom he has quarrelled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla's friends. Camilla slips off to the beach by themselves and falls in love with him. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This is the necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Avis is stunned and Camilla's mother likewise. (Now On With the Story.)

Just met by simulation and inhalation

PROVED BY 2 GENERATIONS

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By EDNA ROSE WEBSTER

Author of "Joretta," "Lipstick Girl," etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Amson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart. Until Peter is able to provide for her, Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money until she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Malson, his former room-mate with whom he has quarrelled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla's friends. Camilla slips off to the beach by themselves and falls in love with him. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This is the necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Avis is stunned and Camilla's mother likewise. (Now On With the Story.)

CHAPTER XXVII

Camilla's unshaken faith in Peter and her quiet resignation to any option or ultimatum, had mollified Mrs. Hoyt, somewhat. She did not discern her as a daughter or command her to leave the Hoyt household, but Camilla decided for herself that it would be the wiser course. She consulted with Rose about renting a small apartment at once.

"I have enough to live on for a few weeks, and I'll surely find work soon," she explained. She had told Rose downtown for the lunch hour and they were facing each other across a little one-uppity table in a room, when she told Rose about her marriage to Peter.

"So you're married! Rose had reproached her. "That's no way to go into business—or marriage, either. You don't know what you are or what you want. Get it, kid! If I had your chance to be somebody—labeled like you've got and a swell education—I wouldn't look at a man."

"As soon as I get work, Rose, I'll help you to go to night school for that secretarial course," Camilla promised generously.

"That's what I want, all right. And you won't see me hitching up to drag a truck after me, just when I get in form, either. Single harness for me and a light, fancy load behind that is mostly myself."

"You will forget all those resolutions if you ever fall in love!" Rose, Camilla smiled kindly, with her own wisdom.

Rose waved the suggestion aside with a flourish of her fork. "I don't believe in that kind of love anymore than I believe there's a Santa Claus. But I say, why do you want to live with me, now? Why do you want to go and live with your husband, now that the secret is out?"

"Warmer or cooler it's a secret, has nothing to do with that, Peter and I agreed to live apart until he is able to take care of me. That may be for a long time yet."

"That's goofy, I'll say. Why wouldn't it be better for you to share your income and go fifty-fifty? Plenty of couples do that and manage to get along."

"And plenty of them don't. No, Rose, when a girl gives her heart to her work for a salary and tries to keep house, she has to let down on one of them. Naturally, it's the housekeeping. As a wife, she fails or at least, home becomes an unpleasant that the man and woman get to thinking of each other they hate. No, until Peter can take care of me, what he sees of me will be my best. We shall be together for pleasure, just as it was for lovers. That way, we always shall be lovers, and our happiness will be saved for the future."

"Oh, I see," laughed Rose, "you prefer being an occasional wife—something like those occasional wifely and babies who advertise around the house for extra use. They're there, ready to be used whenever they're needed. Handy that way, all right!"

For an instant, Camilla glanced at sister's comparison, then she laughed, also. "Put it that way if you wish. I'll add to the metaphor. The occasional chair is not used so much as the old armchair and is treated with more respect. It is the guest chair. That is what I shall be to Peter—his guest-wife."

"Well, for all right to be a guest and sit in a bright new occasional chair for an evening, but you sure do get to home again and slouch down in the old armchair that knows every crook and turn of your disposition, even when it is worn to threads in the arms where your hands rest when you're tired."

Camilla was delighted with Rose's honest burst of drool philosophy. How wise she was, in spite of her bluntness and teasing. This was what she needed. A shrewd business woman, without a doubt, and Camilla resolved she would sacrifice everything necessary, to assure her more training for the position of which she was capable.

Peter isn't going to be much concerned with comfy armchairs or wifely, either, for awhile," she continued. "Right now, he is so busy that he scarcely knows he has a wife. And that's what I'll have to do, to get work. I'll have to try to leave the Hoyt household, but Camilla decided for herself that it would be the wiser course. She consulted with Rose about renting a small apartment at once.

"I have enough to live on for a few weeks, and I'll surely find work soon," she explained. She had told Rose downtown for the lunch hour and they were facing each other across a little one-uppity table in a room, when she told Rose about her marriage to Peter.

"So you're married! Rose had reproached her. "That's no way to go into business—or marriage, either. You don't know what you are or what you want. Get it, kid! If I had your chance to be somebody—labeled like you've got and a swell education—I wouldn't look at a man."

"As soon as I get work, Rose, I'll help you to go to night school for that secretarial course," Camilla promised generously.

"That's what I want, all right. And you won't see me hitching up to drag a truck after me, just when I get in form, either. Single harness for me and a light, fancy load behind that is mostly myself."

"You will forget all those resolutions if you ever fall in love!" Rose, Camilla smiled kindly, with her own wisdom.

Rose waved the suggestion aside with a flourish of her fork. "I don't believe in that kind of love anymore than I believe there's a Santa Claus. But I say, why do you want to live with me, now? Why do you want to go and live with your husband, now that the secret is out?"

"Warmer or cooler it's a secret, has nothing to do with that, Peter and I agreed to live apart until he is able to take care of me. That may be for a long time yet."

"That's goofy, I'll say. Why wouldn't it be better for you to share your income and go fifty-fifty? Plenty of couples do that and manage to get along."

"And plenty of them don't. No, Rose, when a girl gives her heart to her work for a salary and tries to keep house, she has to let down on one of them. Naturally, it's the housekeeping. As a wife, she fails or at least, home becomes an unpleasant that the man and woman get to thinking of each other they hate. No, until Peter can take care of me, what he sees of me will be my best. We shall be together for pleasure, just as it was for lovers. That way, we always shall be lovers, and our happiness will be saved for the future."

"Oh, I see," laughed Rose, "you prefer being an occasional wife—something like those occasional wifely and babies who advertise around the house for extra use. They're there, ready to be used whenever they're needed. Handy that way, all right!"

For an instant, Camilla glanced at sister's comparison, then she laughed, also. "Put it that way if you wish. I'll add to the metaphor. The occasional chair is not used so much as the old armchair and is treated with more respect. It is the guest chair. That is what I shall be to Peter—his guest-wife."

"Well, for all right to be a guest and sit in a bright new occasional chair for an evening, but you sure do get to home again and slouch down in the old armchair that knows every crook and turn of your disposition, even when it is worn to threads in the arms where your hands rest when you're tired."

Camilla was delighted with Rose's honest burst of drool philosophy. How wise she was, in spite of her bluntness and teasing. This was what she needed. A shrewd business woman, without a doubt, and Camilla resolved she would sacrifice everything necessary, to assure her more training for the position of which she was capable.

Peter isn't going to be much concerned with comfy armchairs or wifely, either, for awhile," she continued. "Right now, he is so busy that he scarcely knows he has a wife. And that's what I'll have to do, to get work. I'll have to try to leave the Hoyt household, but Camilla decided for herself that it would be the wiser course. She consulted with Rose about renting a small apartment at once.

"I have enough to live on for a few weeks, and I'll surely find work soon," she explained. She had told Rose downtown for the lunch hour and they were facing each other across a little one-uppity table in a room, when she told Rose about her marriage to Peter.

"So you're married! Rose had reproached her. "That's no way to go into business—or marriage, either. You don't know what you are or what you want. Get it, kid! If I had your chance to be somebody—labeled like you've got and a swell education—I wouldn't look at a man."

"As soon as I get work, Rose, I'll help you to go to night school for that secretarial course," Camilla promised generously.

"That's what I want, all right. And you won't see me hitching up to drag a truck after me, just when I get in form, either. Single harness for me and a light, fancy load behind that is mostly myself."

"You will forget all those resolutions if you ever fall in love!" Rose, Camilla smiled kindly, with her own wisdom.

Rose waved the suggestion aside with a flourish of her fork. "I don't believe in that kind of love anymore than I believe there's a Santa Claus. But I say, why do you want to live with me, now? Why do you want to go and live with your husband, now that the secret is out?"

"Warmer or cooler it's a secret, has nothing to do with that, Peter and I agreed to live apart until he is able to take care of me. That may be for a long time yet."

"That's goofy, I'll say. Why wouldn't it be better for you to share your income and go fifty-fifty? Plenty of couples do that and manage to get along."

"And plenty of them don't. No, Rose, when a girl gives her heart to her work for a salary and tries to keep house, she has to let down on one of them. Naturally, it's the housekeeping. As a wife, she fails or at least, home becomes an unpleasant that the man and woman get to thinking of each other they hate. No, until Peter can take care of me, what he sees of me will be my best. We shall be together for pleasure, just as it was for lovers. That way, we always shall be lovers, and our happiness will be saved for the future."

"Oh, I see," laughed Rose, "you prefer being an occasional wife—something like those occasional wifely and babies who advertise around the house for extra use. They're there, ready to be used whenever they're needed. Handy that way, all right!"

For an instant, Camilla glanced at sister's comparison, then she laughed, also. "Put it that way if you wish. I'll add to the metaphor. The occasional chair is not used so much as the old armchair and is treated with more respect. It is the guest chair. That is what I shall be to Peter—his guest-wife."

"Well, for all right to be a guest and sit in a bright new occasional chair for an evening, but you sure do get to home again and slouch down in the old armchair that knows every crook and turn of your disposition, even when it is worn to threads in the arms where your hands rest when you're tired."

Camilla was delighted with Rose's honest burst of drool philosophy. How wise she was, in spite of her bluntness and teasing. This was what she needed. A shrewd business woman, without a doubt, and Camilla resolved she would sacrifice everything necessary, to assure her more training for the position of which she was capable.

Peter isn't going to be much concerned with comfy armchairs or wifely, either, for awhile," she continued. "Right now, he is so busy that he scarcely knows he has a wife. And that's what I'll have to do, to get work. I'll have to try to leave the Hoyt household, but Camilla decided for herself that it would be the wiser course. She consulted with Rose about renting a small apartment at once.

"I have enough to live on for a few weeks, and I'll surely find work soon," she explained. She had told Rose downtown for the lunch hour and they were facing each other across a little one-uppity table in a room, when she told Rose about her marriage to Peter.

"So you're married! Rose had reproached her. "That's no way to go into business—or marriage, either. You don't know what you are or what you want. Get it, kid! If I had your chance to be somebody—labeled like you've got and a swell education—I wouldn't look at a man."

"As soon as I get work, Rose, I'll help you to go to night school for that secretarial course," Camilla promised generously.

"That's what I want, all right. And you won't see me hitching up to drag a truck after me, just when I get in form, either. Single harness for me and a light, fancy load behind that is mostly myself."

"You will forget all those resolutions if you ever fall in love!" Rose, Camilla smiled kindly, with her own wisdom.

Rose waved the suggestion aside with a flourish of her fork. "I don't believe in that kind of love anymore than I believe there's a Santa Claus. But I say, why do you want to live with me, now? Why do you want to go and live with your husband, now that the secret is out?"

"Warmer or cooler it's a secret, has nothing to do with that, Peter and I agreed to live apart until he is able to take care of me. That may be for a long time yet."

"That's goofy, I'll say. Why wouldn't it be better for you to share your income and go fifty-fifty? Plenty of couples do that and manage to get along."

"And plenty of them don't. No, Rose, when a girl gives her heart to her work for a salary and tries to keep house, she has to let down on one of them. Naturally, it's the housekeeping. As a wife, she fails or at least, home becomes an unpleasant that the man and woman get to thinking of each other they hate. No, until Peter can take care of me, what he sees of me will be my best. We shall be together for pleasure, just as it was for lovers. That way, we always shall be lovers, and our happiness will be saved for the future."

"Oh, I see," laughed Rose, "you prefer being an occasional wife—something like those occasional wifely and babies who advertise around the house for extra use. They're there, ready to be used whenever they're needed. Handy that way, all right!"

For an instant, Camilla glanced at sister's comparison, then she laughed, also. "Put it that way if you wish. I'll add to the metaphor. The occasional chair is not used so much as the old armchair and is treated with more respect. It is the guest chair. That is what I shall be to Peter—his guest-wife."

"Well, for all right to be a guest and sit in a bright new occasional chair for an evening, but you sure do get to home again and slouch down in the old armchair that knows every crook and turn of your disposition, even when it is worn to threads in the arms where your hands rest when you're tired."

Camilla was delighted with Rose's honest burst of drool philosophy. How wise she was, in spite of her bluntness and teasing. This was what she needed. A shrewd business woman, without a doubt, and Camilla resolved she would sacrifice everything necessary, to assure her more training for the position of which she was capable.

Peter isn't going to be much concerned with comfy armchairs or wifely, either, for awhile," she continued. "Right now, he is so busy that he scarcely knows he has a wife. And that's what I'll have to do, to get work. I'll have to try to leave the Hoyt household, but Camilla decided for herself that it would be the wiser course. She consulted with Rose about renting a small apartment at once.

"I have enough to live on for a few weeks, and I'll surely find work soon," she explained. She had told Rose downtown for the lunch hour and they were facing each other across a little one-uppity table in a room, when she told Rose about her marriage to Peter.

"So you're married! Rose had reproached her. "That's no way to go into business—or marriage, either. You don't know what you are or what you want. Get it, kid! If I had your chance to be somebody—labeled like you've got and a swell education—I wouldn't look at a man."

"As soon as I get work, Rose, I'll help you to go to night school for that secretarial course," Camilla promised generously.

"That's what I want, all right. And you won't see me hitching up to drag a truck after me, just when I get in form, either. Single harness for me and a light, fancy load behind that is mostly myself."

"You will forget all those resolutions if you ever fall in love!" Rose, Camilla smiled kindly, with her own wisdom.

Rose waved the suggestion aside with a flourish of her fork. "I don't believe in that kind of love anymore than I believe there's a Santa Claus. But I say, why do you want to live with me, now? Why do you want to go and live with your husband, now that the secret is out?"

"Warmer or cooler it's a secret, has nothing to do with that, Peter and I agreed to live apart until he is able to take care of me. That may be for a long time yet."

"That's goofy, I'll say. Why wouldn't it be better for you to share your income and go fifty-fifty? Plenty of couples do that and manage to get along."

"And plenty of them don't. No, Rose, when a girl gives her heart to her work for a salary and tries to keep house, she has to let down on one of them. Naturally, it's the housekeeping. As a wife, she fails or at least, home becomes an unpleasant that the man and woman get to thinking of each other they hate. No, until Peter can take care of me, what he sees of me will be my best. We shall be together for pleasure, just as it was for lovers. That way, we always shall be lovers, and our happiness will be saved for the future."

"Oh, I see," laughed Rose, "you prefer being an occasional wife—something like those occasional wifely and babies who advertise around the house for extra use. They're there, ready to be used whenever they're needed. Handy that way, all right!"

For an instant, Camilla glanced at sister's comparison, then she laughed, also. "Put it that way if you wish. I'll add to the metaphor. The occasional chair is not used so much as the old armchair and is treated with more respect. It is the guest chair. That is what I shall be to Peter—his guest-wife."

"Well, for all right to be a guest and sit in a bright new occasional chair for an evening, but you sure do get to home again and slouch down in the old armchair that knows every crook and turn of your disposition, even when it is worn to threads in the arms where your hands rest when you're tired."

Camilla was delighted with Rose's honest burst of drool philosophy. How wise she was, in spite of her bluntness and teasing. This was what she needed. A shrewd business woman, without a doubt, and Camilla resolved she would sacrifice everything necessary, to assure her more training for the position of which she was capable.

Peter isn't going to be much concerned with comfy armchairs or wifely, either, for awhile," she continued. "Right now, he is so busy that he scarcely knows he has a wife. And that's what I'll have to do, to get work. I'll have to try to leave the Hoyt household, but Camilla decided for herself that it would be the wiser course. She consulted with Rose about renting a small apartment at once.

"I have enough to live on for a few weeks, and I'll surely find work soon," she explained. She had told Rose downtown for the lunch hour and they were facing each other across a little one-uppity table in a room, when she told Rose about her marriage to Peter.

"So you're married! Rose had reproached her. "That's no way to go into business—or marriage, either. You don't know what you are or what you want. Get it, kid! If I had your chance to be somebody—labeled like you've got and a swell education—I wouldn't look at a man."

"As soon as I get work, Rose, I'll help you to go to night school for that secretarial course," Camilla promised generously.

"That's what I want, all right. And you won't see me hitching up to drag a truck after me, just when I get in form, either. Single harness for me and a light, fancy load behind that is mostly myself."

"You will forget all those resolutions if you ever fall in love!" Rose, Camilla smiled kindly, with her own wisdom.

Rose waved the suggestion aside with a flourish of her fork. "I don't believe in that kind of love anymore than I believe there's a Santa Claus. But I say, why do you want to live with me, now? Why do you want to go and live with your husband, now that the secret is out?"

"Warmer or cooler it's a secret, has nothing to do with that, Peter and I agreed to live apart until he is able to take care of me. That may be for a long time yet."

"That's goofy, I'll say. Why wouldn't it be better for you to share your income and go fifty-fifty? Plenty of couples do that and manage to get along."

"And plenty of them don't. No, Rose, when a girl gives her heart to her work for a salary and tries to keep house, she has to let down on one of them. Naturally, it's the housekeeping. As a wife, she fails or at least, home becomes an unpleasant that the man and woman get to thinking of each other they hate. No, until Peter can take care of me, what he sees of me will be my best. We shall be together for pleasure, just as it was for lovers. That way, we always shall be lovers, and our happiness will be saved for the future."

"Oh, I see," laughed Rose, "you prefer being an occasional wife—something like those occasional wifely and babies who advertise around the house for extra use. They're there, ready to be used whenever they're needed. Handy that way, all right!"

For an instant, Camilla glanced at sister's comparison, then she laughed, also. "Put it that way if you wish. I'll add to the metaphor. The occasional chair is not used so much as the old armchair and is treated with more respect. It is the guest chair. That is what I shall be to Peter—his guest-wife."

"Well, for all right to be a guest and sit in a bright new occasional chair for an evening, but you sure do get

